

March 14, 2023

AY2023 Class Implementation Policy at the Graduate School of Economics

The policy on the conduct of courses offered in AY2023 at the Graduate School of Economics (GSE) is as follows.

All courses will be conducted face-to-face. Each class will take place face-to-face from the first session.

If it is difficult to attend face-to-face classes for the reason below, students must consult with the Graduate Office or instructors of the course before the courses start. The instructors will decide how to deal with the situation after consulted.

- Students who have a strong anxiety about COVID-19 infection because students themselves or family members living with them cannot take vaccinations due to underlying diseases.

(Note)

- For the courses not provided at the GSE, please check the information of the Faculties or Graduate schools where the courses are offered since the system may differ from the GSE.
- The mode of delivery for any course is subject to change due to unavoidable circumstances.

If you contract COVID-19 or develop a fever or other symptoms that are suspected of being caused by COVID-19 infection, please consult with your instructor.

Graduate School of Economics